

Would you complete an online survey to help understand thoughts of ending life amongst autistic people?

We know that autistic adults experience more thoughts of ending life than the general population but we don't know why. We are looking for people to complete a survey to produce evidence that can be used to inform interventions, risk assessments and support services that meet the specific needs of autistic people. The more people take part in the survey, the stronger evidence we will collect!

You can take part if you are:

- Autistic or not autistic
- Aged 18 or over

The survey is anonymous, online and takes around 45 minutes to complete. You may leave an email address to complete a follow up survey and receive a copy of results. The study has received ethical approval from Coventry University.
